Crane Library Marks 50th Anniversary Of Apollo 11 Moonwalk

By TOM GORMAN

David Weinstein was 13 years old at a summer camp in New York's Catskills on July 20, 1969 when he joined fellow campers in watching the historic Apollo 11 moonwalk on television.

Now a Quincy resident, Weinstein recounted the memory five decades later to the day during the Thomas Crane Public Library's 50th anniversary celebration of the first moonwalk. The event featured children's activities including crafts, taking a virtual moonwalk with Virtual Reality goggles, and a video of the actual footage of the moonwalk. Adults who witnessed the moonwalk on television were invited to record their recollections for National Public Radio's StoryCorps that will be shared with millions online.

"It's an intergenerational program," said Teen Librarian Kerri Darcy, explaining the two-hour event held on Saturday marking the Apollo 11 moonwalk. "We utilized teens to interview adults who remembered watching the moon landing."

Four adults recorded their memories that will be archived for StoryCorps. The StoryCorps initiative involves recording, preserving, and sharing stories of Americans from all backgrounds and beliefs. Darcy said the moon landing recordings would be indexed and uploaded to the StoryCorps site.

"People can use the key phrase 'moon landing' and the moon landing recordings will come up," she said.

Expansion Planned At Pine Hill Cemetery

The city is planning to expand Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy, which will give residents the chance to pre purchase burial lots for the first time in decades.

The city purchased about 50 acres of land from the state in 1962 to house the new cemetery; about 13 of those acres of those acres have been used for burials to date. The City Council in June approved a conservation restriction for additional land that will be incorporated into the cemetery.

Big Y In NQ Closing

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Big Y supermarket in North Quincy is set to close after the Springfield-based company was unable to negotiate a lease extension for the site.

A spokeswoman for the company said it would be closing its location at 475 Hancock St. because it was unable to negotiate a lease extension with the owner of the property. The closing date has not yet been determined, the spokeswoman said. The supermarket is looking at other possible locations in Quincy and nearby communities.

Current store employees will be offered positions at other Big Y locations, the spokeswoman said, or a bonus if they do not wish to work at a different location.

Big Y first came to Quincy in September 2016 when the company purchased eight stores from Hannaford, which formerly operated the grocery store on site. Big Y purchased the Hannaford locations following the merger of the parent companies that own Hannaford and Stop & Shop.

JQA Remembered As One Of Nation's Best Leaders

Remarks, Wreath Honor
Sixth U.S. President On
252nd Birthday Anniversary

By SCOTT JACKSON

The founder of an international movement that emphasizes the importance of culture and social empathy said John Quincy Adams should be remembered as one of America's best and most inspiring leaders on what would have been the sixth president's 252nd birthday.

A wreath-laying ceremony to commemorate the birthday anniversary was held July 11 at the United First Parish Church in Quincy. The church, fondly known as the Church of the Presidents, is the final resting of Adams and his wife Louisa. John and Abigail Adams are also entombed in the crypt below the church.

Jordi Albareda was chosen as the keynote speaker for the occasion. He founded Fair Saturday — a movement that stresses the importance of culture and social empathy — in 2014 in Bilbao, a city of 345,000 residents in the Spanish province of Biscay. Fair Saturday, held in November after Black Friday, has since spread to other parts of Spain, the United Kingdom and, starting this year, Quincy.

Albareda said the sixth president understood the value of culture, noting Adams took time to translate classical works of literature and saw European education and cultural institutions as models for those in the United States.

Adams, Albareda said, believed in serving both his country and humanity. He cited the sixth president's support of the abolition of slavery, belief in justice and his benevolence.

"John Quincy Adams should be considered...as one of the best and most inspiring leaders of the United States of America. Worldwide leaders might learn from him and understand they have a mission...to serve their countries while serving humanity. That is what John Quincy Adams did during his whole life," Albareda said.

"Thank you for serving the humankind and your country, your state, and your community. Thanks for your legacy."

Albareda said he was also inspired by John Adams, in particular for taking John Quincy Adams, who was 11 at the time, with him to Europe on a diplomatic mission in the midst of the Revolutionary War. The father and son first landed in Spain and traveled through Biscay en route to Paris.

"Children are the most powerful tool to build a better future. John Adams knew it," Albareda said. "One of the facts that impressed me the most about the second president of the United States of America is not that he traveled to Europe in 1779...but the fact that he traveled with his son."

Albareda started the Fair Saturday movement following the birth of his first son — children, he said, remind you what you what is truly meaningful in life. Albareda

County Sheriff Swears In 13 New Correctional Officers

Nearly 100 people gathered in the Quincy High School auditorium June 28 to watch 13 training academy graduates be sworn in as the newest members of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office (NCSO).

Sheriff Jerry McDermott welcomed the new officers to the team and administered their oath before each individual officer came forward to receive his badge.

"These 13 young men have successfully completed 400 hours of training over 10 weeks. They more than succeeded, they excelled. They have earned the rights and privileges to be bestowed upon them today," McDermott said.

The newest members of the NCSO staff are:

James Aikens (Quincy), Joseph Alibrandi (Quincy), Jahmari Bartley (Walpole), Matthew Beard (Hanover), Andrew Connelly (Stonham), Robert Harnais (Braintree), Quenten Harrell (Franklin), Sean Harrington (Quincy), John Mahoney III (Braintree), Mitchell Mooney (Easton), Luke Sprague (Wrentham), Jared Van Ness (Walpole), and Jake Walsh (Watertown).

"This graduating class is well suited for our mission," McDermott said. "Nearly all of you hail from Norfolk County. Many of you are from families with proud traditions of law enforcement service. You are also accomplished individuals — even before joining our ranks. As a group, you are military service members and veterans, college educated, and professionals. You have elected to bring your backgrounds, skills and personal integrity to a noble profession that our society depends on."

The graduates received 10 weeks of classroom and practical training focused on interpersonal communications, corrections and criminal justice systems, transportation procedures, defensive tactics, firearms and first responder training, among other areas.

"This caliber of training is just one of the reasons the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is a nationally accredited criminal justice agency. Our mission is to house and rehabilitate offenders sentenced to the House of Corrections," McDermott said. "Yet, we are also an integral part of the community. We are partners with our police departments, senior centers and municipal governments. We provide support and specialized services for law enforcement. We help seniors, parents and students stay safe. Today's graduates are joining an outward-facing organization committed to serving the communities we call home."

Graduates had to successfully pass classroom, physical fitness and firearms tests, and participate in on the job training at the Norfolk County House of Correction.

COLOR YOUR WORLD

Diamonds are simply glorious. They twinkle like the brightest star in the sky and shimmer like summer sunshine on the wet sand. They also come in all the colors of the rainbow. Naturally colored diamonds referred to as fancy colored diamonds, come in blue, red, green, yellow, brown, purple, violet, and pink. The coloration is the result of a foreign particle being trapped during the crystallization process when diamonds are forming. Exposing them to other factors such as radiation and pressure will add to the final unique color. One in every ten thousand diamonds is a natural colored diamond. Brides are including colored diamonds in their engagement rings to make them even more unique and personal.

Every diamond has its own color and characteristics, and no two are exactly alike. Because of this, it is absolutely vital that you choose diamonds and other precious gemstones from a jeweler you know and trust, a jeweler you can feel comfortable with when discussing your questions. You'll want a jeweler you can turn to for service and advice in the future, someone who is established in the community with a reputation for integrity and reliability. We'd be happy to help in all your fine jewelry choices here at Rogers Jewelry, 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. Pine Hill Expansion Planned now in the endgame, Mayor Thomas Koch said.

"It's finally at its final stages and I'm very pleased about that because it's going to open up several thousand graves that should take us into the next few decades for need," Koch said recently in an interview.

The plan to expand the cemetery entailed a lengthy review process by the state, Koch stated.

"There are all kinds of sign offs on this with everybody," he said. "Unfortunately, when the cemetery land was purchased from the state back in the '60s, if they had just laid out the whole road network in the cemetery, it wouldn't be an issue. But cemeteries you generally build out a section at a time as money comes in. Well, the environmental laws got tougher and tougher while we weren't building out sections, so lo and behold a good part of that cemetery is no longer in play."

The city has not allowed residents to pre purchase burial lots at either of its active cemeteries - Pine Hill and Mount Wollaston - for decades, Koch said, because of the limited amount of space.

"When we get the final plan together on Pine Hill, it will be the first time in decades we have pre-need sales. Right now, the deal is you can't buy a grave until you have a death in the family, and you need it immediately. It is immediate need only," the mayor said.

"With the additional graves being provided up at Pine Hill, we're going to be able to open that up so people can plan. A lot of people go and get their pre-planning done - they would be able to get their lot as part of the pre-planning and it will be locked in. That's good for the city too, because that gives us more revenue up front to help us build out the cemetery."

There is no timeline yet for when the expanded cemetery area will open, Koch said, because the final design of the space has yet to be determined. Once the design is done, the Cemetery Board of Managers would have to decide whether to build out the area at once or go section-by-section. The board will also determine if the vaults in which caskets are placed during interments are pre-buried, among other decisions.

"I think there were some rough designs done...now [we] have to fine tune it and get an actual engineering build-out plan," Koch said.

"Then the question is OK, do we build out all of it? Do we take out a bond and pay back the bond with the sale of lots? Do we do a section at a time like we always have? Do we do the box already in the ground? Some cemeteries do that - literally, the boxes are put in and you take the lid off and drop the casket in.

"Those are the kinds of things the board will have to make a decision on."

The veterans' section at Pine Hill is nearly full, Koch said, and the new area of the cemetery could include a new section for veterans. It will also likely feature a space for cremated remains, given the increase in the prevalence of cremation.

There is no other city land that could be converted to a cemetery in the future, Koch said. While some state land could be purchased for that purpose, the mayor said it would not be necessary to go that route after Pine Hill is expanded.

"I don't think there is any city land," Koch said when asked about adding a new municipal cemetery. "A number of years ago when [David] Balfour was commissioner of the MDC, now the DCR, I had proposed to him that we would swap the remainder of Pine Hill and take the left-hand side of Ricciuti Drive all the way up and create a new cemetery there. He declined it. He indicated he thought they were going to be building ice-skating rinks and all kinds [of things], which I knew never was going to happen.

"So, there are still some potential state pieces of land around...but that build out of Pine Hill will go a long way for a long time, I think."

Koch said there are some graves that become available at Mount Wollaston Cemetery at the discretion of the Cemetery Board of Managers. State law, he explained, allows the city to take back graves that have gone unused for 75 years.

"Today, if there is a 30-lot grave that a family bought in 1890 and there hasn't been any action in 75 years - maybe there are six people in there - the city can advertise, try to reach out to those people to try to get those graves back - buy them back or re-use them under the law," Koch said.

"In a lot of cases the family just dies off or they move to other parts of the country and there is no interest in coming back to the old family lot. So, you've got some of those lots we have looked at over the years."

Graves also remain available in the veterans' section at Mount Wollaston, which Koch plans to expand by removing one of the walkways adjacent to the World War II memorial overlooking Sea Street.

"We still have some graves available for veterans. I'm looking to take a section of road out in the veterans' section to create some more veterans' graves," he said.

Great Job Scott Logan For Cemetery Care

I'd like to give a big shout out to Scott Logan for the great job he is doing at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. My sister and I chat with him often when we visit loved ones' graves and we've learned that he is a genuinely nice, compassionate, hard-working guy.

He told us once that in each grave rests someone's loved one and when they come to visit they deserve to see a well-tended grave. I've never forgotten that and, obviously, neither has he.

Scott, thanks so much. You're truly one of the good ones.

Trump Will Go Down As A Great President

I just finished reading the most disgusting article (letter to the editor) in the July 18 paper written by Claire Fitzmaurice. In 2016 I dropped the Ledger be-

Kudos For Well-Written, Researched Response

Kudos to Claire Fitzmaurice for such a well-written and researched response to Mr. McCauley's op-ed. Hogwash indeed.

Sometimes I wonder about some members of the "greatest generation." Have they forgotten that part of what they fought for was free and open elections not to be interfered with by foreign powers? Especially by a power still dedicated to the downfall of our democracy.

McCauley needs to go back and read the Constitution and refamiliarize himself as to what is in there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1948 postcard reproduction of the Wollaston Theatre on Beale Street in Wollaston Center. Built in 1926, it opened as a vaudeville and silent-picture theater named in New Wollaston. The original Wollaston Theatre had operated on a small stage in the old Masonic Temple building to the right. About 1930 the new theater with 1,259 seats was upgraded to show talking movies. A few years after this picture was taken the vertical marquee shown here was replaced with the angular one that remained for years. The featured movie on the marquee – Back to Batan, starred John Wayne and Anthony Quinn in a 1945 film about American-led guerillas in The Philippines after General MacArthur's withdrawal in 1942. The "Wolly," as it was affectionately known to generations of Quincy moviegoers, was the last neighborhood theater in Quincy when it closed in 2003. The theater was later sold and the building eventually demolished in 2016. A condominium development has been proposed for the site.

Quincy 'Neat Neighbors' Contest Underway

Mayor Thomas Koch announces the return of the city's "Neat Neighbors" contest that recognizes property owners that do an excellent job maintaining their home or business.

Friends, relatives, neighbors, or strangers can nominate an address for recognition from now through Labor Day by calling (617) 376-1251 or emailing pdoherty@quincyma.gov.

"Beautification is a team effort and I appreciate the hard work and time that go into keeping a lawn, yard, and home beautiful," Koch said. "We have thousands of residents who have made this a labor of love and I think we should recognize their contribution to the overall aesthetics of our city."

Each nominated property will be reviewed to ensure it meets the requirements for property maintenance. Once the property qualifies, winners will be selected at random to avoid competitive judgments.

Qualifying properties will have maintained lawns, plantings, and homes in good repair.

A special category will be added for business and commercial properties this year.

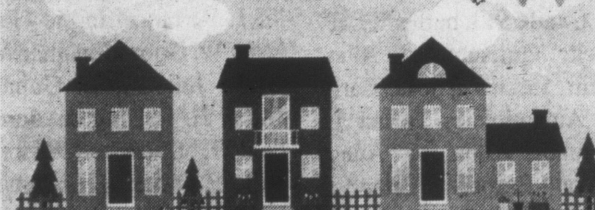

"Many businesses do a fine job presenting their properties, but some could definitely do more," Koch said. "We are hoping that this endeavor creates a city-wide conversation about beautification that helps lift the overall aesthetics of our residential and business districts."

There will be twenty-five residential properties and ten commercial properties chosen as winners. Those properties selected as winners will receive a $30 gift certificate at a Quincy-based garden center to recognize their efforts.

NEAT NEIGHBOR CONTEST

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Mayor Thomas Koch has announced the return of the City's "Neat Neighbors" contest that recognizes property owners that do an excellent job maintaining their home or business.

Each nominated property will be reviewed to ensure it meets the requirements for property maintenance. Once the property qualifies, winners will be selected at random to avoid competitive judgments. Qualifying properties will have maintained lawns, plantings, and homes in good repair. A special category will be added for business and commercial properties this year.

There will be twenty-five residential properties and ten commercial properties chosen as winners. Those properties selected as winners will receive a $30 gift certificate at a Quincy-based garden center to recognize their efforts and help continue their work.

Friends, relatives, neighbors, or strangers can nominate an address for recognition from now through Labor Day by calling (617) 376-1251 or emailing pdoherty@quincyma.gov.

Jillian Harrington Merchant Marine Academy Nominee

Cong. Stephen Lynch announces the nomination of Jillian Harrington of Quincy for appointment to the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

Harrington, the daughter of Christopher Harrington, is a 2019 graduate of North Quincy High School.

As part of his congressional duties, Lynch nominates exemplary candidates to the service academies each year.

"These candidates are the best of the best, and I am proud of their desire to serve our country," said Lynch. "The academies graduate leaders who will guide our nation into the future and the men and women who attend the academies are entrusted with the greatest responsibility – to serve and protect the United States of America."

Harrington was highly recommended by her teachers at North Quincy High School.

"She is a remarkable young woman, and we are fortunate that young people like Jillian are willing to serve our nation," Lynch said.

Lynch and his congressional liaison to the U.S. Service Academies, Bob Fowkes, examined each candidate's record of academic, athletic, and service achievements in addition to evaluating letters of recommendation. After an extensive review process and a personal interview, Harrington was selected as someone whose scholastic record and community contributions elevated her to the top of a list of well-qualified candidates.

"There were many impressive candidates this year for the United States Merchant Marine Academy," Lynch said. "Jillian stood out as a young woman of keen intelligence and strong character. She is a wonderful reflection of her father, Christopher. The Harrington family, the City of Quincy, and the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts should be proud of Jillian in this achievement."

Students interested in attending one of the United States Service Academies should contact Bob Fowkes in Congressman Lynch's Boston office at (617) 428-2000.

Overwhelming Red Attacks Force U.S. Troops To Retreat

Waves of fanatical North Korean troops drove elements of the U.S. First Cavalry Division out of Yongdong narrowing the American defense perimeter in Southeast Korea.

Yongdong was evacuated after a fierce daylong fight.

North Korean Communist troops seized the southwestern tip of Korea and turned eastward toward Pusan, the U.S. supply port on the southeastern tip of the peninsula.

Jack James, a United Press war correspondent, noted that, "the next week will determine whether American forces will be able to stay in Korean or be forced to withdraw. The troops we have there now will not be enough." (Editor's note: U.S. forces stabilized the defense line along the Nakdong River and held off North Korean attacks through August and early September. There would be a breakout of the Pusan Perimeter in mid-September after the Inchon landings. All of South Korea would be free of enemy troops by early October.)

THREE MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL EACH MONTH SOUGHT BY BURGIN

Two afternoon meetings and one evening meeting each month for the city council was advocated today by Mayor Thomas S. Burgin. Under present council rules the council meets twice a month, the first and third Mondays.

"I will advocate such a plan at the next meeting of the council and introduce an order to that effect," said Burgin.

"The business of the council has grown. I believe it is no longer possible to act on all the matters to come before it when there are but two meetings a month."

(Editor's note: Mayor Burgin's plan failed.)

Fiesta Macaroni Salad

By MARIE

Most of us have made macaroni salad every which way - especially in the summer. Today's recipe is a different one, at least it was for me, and even pretty to look at.

This festive, summery, salad recipe is easy to make and you are going to love the easy-to-make dressing too!

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 pound mini shells
- 3 ears of corn-husked and kernels removed, uncooked (or 3 cups of frozen corn)
- 1 red bell pepper (diced small)
- 1 green bell pepper (diced small)
- 1 yellow bell pepper (diced small)
- 1 pound of grape tomatoes

In a large pot, boil shells and corn together and while that is cooking dice up the peppers in very small pieces and set aside, along with the grape tomatoes.

Recipe for dressing:

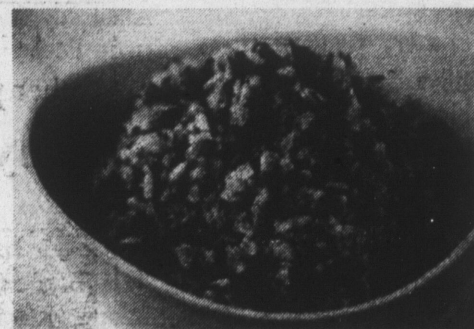

- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- Juice of two lemons
- Mix all ingredients together, blend well and set aside.

After pasta and corn are drained, place in large bowl.

While still warm add the diced peppers mixing and blending well.

Then add the dressing, folding and blending until all ingredients are well covered.

Arrange the grape tomatoes on the top and enjoy!

only one with all 8 amino acids, making it a complete protein. It is easy to digest, and an excellent strength building food.

The Incas used to make "war balls" out of quinoa to give them the strength and endurance they needed before going off to war. Legend has it that the Spanish conquerors burned down the quinoa fields and made the Incas grow wheat instead, knowing it was more of a "weakening" grain.

Arugula is a slightly bitter green with many health benefits, including detoxification, and many phytonutrients. Some say if eaten enough, coffee cravings will disappear, due to the bitter properties associated with it.

It's also delicious in a salad with other mixed greens.

Quinoa Salad

By SUSIE

- 3 cups cooked quinoa (I like to cook in vegetable broth for extra flavor)
- 1 red pepper, chopped
- 1/3 cup scallions, chopped
- 1/3 cup golden raisins
- 1/4 cup sliced almonds
- 1/2 cup fresh basil, chopped
- 1/2 cup fresh parsley, chopped
- Bunch of arugula

Dressing

- 1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 2 tps. Dijon mustard
- 1 tsp raw honey
- 1 clove garlic, pressed
- Sea salt and pepper to taste

After quinoa is cooked, add arugula to "wilt". Once cooled, add all other ingredients and toss with dressing.

Join Catherine Doherty and Loretta DeGrazia and cruise towards a cure for neurofibromatosis in honor of their son, Miguel, on Saturday, Aug. 17.

The second annual Cruising with Motown 4 NF fundraiser will take place from 4 to 7 p.m. that evening aboard the Boston Belle. The ship departs from Squantum Point Park in Quincy. DJ Murph is back by popular demand and Mo-

Is TV Watching The Unhealthiest Type Of Sitting?

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Next time you're ready to hit the couch for a night of TV, think twice, it just might shorten your life.

Although excessive sitting has consistently been linked to health risks, a new study suggests that all sitting isn't identical, and sitting in front of the TV after dinner for sustained hours is particularly unhealthy. In fact, researchers reported, those who sat for lengthy periods of time increased their risk for heart attack, stroke and early death by 50% compared to those who did not.

Keith Diaz, an assistant professor of behavioral medicine at Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, and a lead researcher, pointed out that it's the combination of dinner and sitting on the couch watching TV for hours afterward that appears to be extremely toxic. He also stated that sitting in front of the TV is distinctive from sitting at work.

At work, most people get up and move often, walking to a coworker's desk, visiting the bathroom, or using the copy machine. In contrast when a person sits and watches TV, they tend not to move for hours at a time. That type of sitting is the most harmful type of sitting. Hours of binge watching in front of the television after dinner increases blood sugar and cholesterol.

Additionally, because muscles are inactive, they don't help clear away the sugar and fat from blood vessels, making this type of sitting so dangerous.

The study followed approximately 3,600 Mississippians for almost nine years. Participants reported how much time they typically spent sitting while watching TV and doing work. They also recounted their exercise habits.

The research found that those who watched TV four hours or more a day had a 50% higher risk for heart attack, stroke and early death, compared with those whose TV time was less than two hours a day. Remarkably, the study also discovered that those who sat for lengthy periods on the job had the same risk for heart disease and early death as those who sat the least in front of the television.

Researchers were quick to point out, that the study doesn't prove that sitting for long, uninterrupted periods causes heart attacks or stroke or premature death, merely that there's a link.

Professor Diaz expressed that the last thing you should do after a big meal is sit down and watch TV for hours, he pointed out that a healthier alternative was to go out for a 10- to 20-minute walk and then sit down.

It is important to note that even the most dedicated couch potatoes could still reduce their risk by getting a little exercise. Diaz said that for those who watched a lot of TV, exercising for at least 150 minutes a week removed the added health risk.

Dr. Gregg Fonarow, an American Heart Association spokesman and professor of cardiology at the University of California, Los Angeles said these findings support the current recommendations to reduce time spent sitting and to engage in at least 150 minutes per week of moderate intensity aerobic activity spread throughout the week.

Moderate intensity aerobic activities include brisk walking (at least 2.5 miles per hour), dancing, gardening, tennis and biking. Even light intensity physical activity can offset some of the risks of being sedentary. The findings of this research study were published online June 26 in the Journal of the American Heart Association.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

23 Submit Nomination Papers For Fall Election

The deadline to submit nomination papers, along with the signatures of 50 people registered to vote in the city, to the Board of Registrars of Voters passed on July 19. The 23 residents submitted nomination papers before the deadline; four others who pulled papers did not return them.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo said her office is in the process of certifying nomination papers to ensure the would-be candidates obtained the requisite number of signatures.

Three candidates submitted nomination papers to run for a four-year mayoral term: incumbent Thomas Koch of 249 Newbury Ave. and challengers Brenda Ryan of 14 Cranch St. and Tracey Dorgan of 108 Sherman St. Koch was first elected mayor in 2007 and was re-elected to two-year terms in 2009, 2011 and 2013. In 2015, he was elected to a four-year term - the first in Quincy's history after voters approved doubling the mayoral term in a 2013 referendum.

A win for Koch would make him the longest-serving mayor in the city's history. Two other mayors - Amelio Della Chiesa and James Sheets - each served for 12 years. Della Chiesa served for four years under a Plan E form of government and then eight years under Plan A; Sheets' entire tenure was under Plan A, the city's current form of government.

The three residents to return nomination papers in the race for the Ward 1 seat on the City Council are: incumbent David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Rd. and challengers Danielle Kempe of 1 Adams St. and Joseph Murphy of 18 Macy St. McCarthy is seeking his second two-year term on the council.

The preliminary election would be held Sept. 10. The top two vote getters in each race would advance to the final election, which is set for Nov. 5.

All three incumbent at-large councillors - Noel DiBona of 70 Chickatabot Rd., Nina Liang of 2 Williams St. and Anne Mahoney of 12 Ferriter St. - returned nomination papers to run for re-election, as did challenger Frank Rubino of 5 Whiton Ave. DiBona and Liang are seeking their third two-year terms and Mahoney is running for her second term.

Two residents - William Burke of 28 Rice Rd. and John Rodophele of 62 Grenwood Rd. - pulled papers to run for an at-large seat but did not return them before the deadline. A preliminary election would have been necessary if all five candidates qualified for the ballot.

The two candidates to return papers for the Ward 3 seat are incumbent Ian Cain of 8 Highpoint Cir. and challenger Eriberto Soto, Jr., of 627 Adams St. Cain is seeking his third two-year term.

Two candidates submitted papers to run for the Ward 5 seat being vacated by incumbent Kirsten Hughes; she was first elected to the seat in 2011. They are Stephen Christo and of 42 Standish Ave. and Charles Phelan of 298 Fenno St. Phelan formerly represented Ward 5 on the council from 1988 to 1996.

Two residents who had pulled papers to run for Ward 5 councillor did not file them: Mary Lally, 10 Weston Ave. and Christopher DeCambra, 25 Langley Cir.

In Ward 6, incumbent William Harris of 74 Ashworth Rd. and challenger William Isenberg of 36

Carle Rd. both returned nomination papers. Harris is seeking his third term.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall of 92 Viden Rd. and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci of 16 Cross St. will be unopposed in the fall. Croall is seeking his fifth term and Palmucci is seeking his sixth.

Four candidates submitted nomination papers to run for the three seats on the School Committee that will be contested in the fall. They include incumbents Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave. and Kathryn Hubley of 44 Marion St. as well as challengers Courtney Perdios of 86 Ruggles St. and Frank Santoro of 14 Lois Ter. Bregoli and Hubley are each seeking their third four-year term on the committee. Santoro previously served on the committee for two terms as well.

The third incumbent school board member, James DeAmicis, is not seeking a second term.

The candidates who do qualify for the ballot have until 5 p.m. on Aug. 6 to submit a statement of candidacy to Crispo's office. The deadline for withdrawals and objections is 5 p.m. on Aug. 9. A drawing to determine ballot position in the preliminary election would be held at 10 a.m. on Aug. 16.

The deadline to register to vote in the preliminary election is 8 p.m. on Aug. 21. The deadline to register to vote in the final election is 8 p.m. on Oct. 16. Absentee balloting ends at noon the day prior to each election day.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty - Will Social Security Go Bust?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I'm always hearing rumors of Social Security imploding - of people my age getting benefits but not the younger as they have time to do something else. I wonder if I file in December for 50% of my spouse's benefit, and later, before I turn 70 and change to my own benefits, if SS goes bust will I lose what I would have been able to claim under myself? I understand that you would only be guessing to answer that. From what I've read, it seems that 20% reduction will be necessary across the board. I do not trust politicians who love to play Santa to get reelected. Signed: Untrusting Senior

Dear Untrusting Senior: As of right now, Social Security (SS) has about $2.9 trillion in reserves in its Trust Fund. Beginning probably in 2020, SS income will be less than needed to pay all benefits, and money will start to be withdrawn from the Trust Fund to meet benefit obligations. Current projections are that the Trust Fund reserves are sufficient to pay 100% of benefit obligations until 2035, at which time SS will only be able to pay out as much money as it brings in. According to projections, that would result in about a 21% cut in benefits for all beneficiaries. But those dire predictions are only valid if Congress does nothing to resolve Social Security's cash flow deficit expected to start in 2020.

The solutions for Social Security's financial issues are very well known to Congress. What's missing is a bipartisan agreement on the best way to resolve it. One side of the aisle wants to simply raise Social Security taxes (remove payroll caps and raise FICA contributions), while the other side prefers future program adjustments which deal with the reality that people are living much longer today than they did when SS was first enacted. Most pundits believe that Congress will eventually reach a compromise before the Trust Fund is depleted in 2035 requiring benefit cuts. After all, what politician who wishes to stay in Congress would want to be associated with reducing Social Security benefits for the very large and voting senior citizenry?

To get to your specific question: There is no real danger of SS going "bust," as in not being able to pay any benefits at all, so you'll never "lose what I would have been able to claim under myself." The worst-case scenario is that your age 70 benefit (which will be about 32% more than your age 66 benefit) might be reduced, but it would never be totally eliminated. The best-case scenario is that Congress puts the current vitriolic atmosphere aside and does their job to fix the problem before it's a crisis.

The last time Social Security had a crisis of this nature was in 1983, and the Democratic-controlled Congress and the Reagan Administration worked together to enact a fix which lasted for decades (until now). It's my sincere hope, and indeed my expectation, that a similar bipartisan effort will eventually take place to resolve Social Security's financial issues for many decades to come. The Association of Mature American Citizens (AMAC) has developed a common-sense Social Security Guarantee proposal which has been presented to multiple Congressional representatives for consideration, and which would solve Social Security's financial issues for generations. If you'd like to see that proposal feel free to go to this link: <https://amac.us/social-security/>. Will Congress act on this any time soon? I'm afraid that's impossible to predict, but if history offers any insight it's that they will probably act only when the crisis can no longer be ignored.

Koch: New Squantum School Next Priority

By SCOTT JACKSON

With the South-West Middle School now open to students, Mayor Thomas Koch believes the state will partner with the city to begin the process of replacing the century-old Squantum Elementary School.

Koch is also focused on building a new elementary school in West Quincy and the city will take ownership of the land where it would be built this summer.

The mayor has long identified Squantum Elementary School on Huckins Avenue, which first opened in 1919, as the next school facility to be replaced after the Sterling Middle School. The South-West Middle School – Sterling's replacement – opened this spring.

The city submitted statements of interest regarding the Squantum Elementary School to the Massachusetts School Building Authority in recent years, the first step in securing state funding for the replacing or renovating school facilities; state officials have yet to advance the project past that preliminary stage. The mayor expects that to change with the South-West Middle School now complete.

"As you know, we've requested the last few years and were rejected to get into the queue," Koch said in a recent interview. "The SBA is under tremendous pressure for so many projects across the state. I believe we are going to be invited into this round now that the South-West is finished, and that begins the whole process that is laid out by the SBA."

"The process is longer than it used to be. I think that's deliberate to stretch things out to spread the projects around. We will be ready."

The new building would likely be located on what is now the Wendall Moses Playground, the 3.6-acre field located on Parke Street behind the school. Doing so would require a land swap because the field is park land, Koch said; the same thing was required when the Clifford Marshall Elementary School was constructed on what was Victory Park.

The current Squantum Elementary School stands one-story tall. Koch said the new facility would likely be taller with a smaller footprint, allowing the city to give back more green space than will be removed to construct the building.

"The beauty is there is a lot of land around it. Instead of having this big, long linear structure, we would probably go up a couple stories and make it shorter and pick up some more land around it. We will more than replace what was there for parks and probably improve the whole traffic and parking flow for the school," Koch said.

The City Council in 2017 approved Koch's request for a $2.7 million bond to purchase the former St. Mary School on Crescent Street, which the mayor is eyeing as the site of a new elementary school. The city will take ownership of the property this summer, Koch said; the sale has yet to go through because the Archdiocese of Boston wanted the Zoning Board of Appeals to first determine St. Mary Parish would still have adequate parking to meet the city's zoning requirements.

"We should be passing papers this summer," Koch said. "The archdiocese had wanted through the ZBA to make sure that they weren't putting the church in non-conformance for parking, even though under the Dover Amendment churches are kind of exempt from a lot of local zoning. It's kind of like belts and suspenders."

The next step would be to prepare the site for demolition.

"That should be finalized this summer – the actual transaction should be done – at that point we will then look at a process of when the demolition would be for the old school and the rectory, cleaning up the site and then waiting our turn to get back into the queue for the School Building Authority subsequent to Squantum," Koch said.

The mayor has said he would support building an elementary school on site to help take pressure off the Lincoln-Hancock and Montclair elementary schools – many students residing to the west of Interstate 93 attend the latter school. The final use of the site will ultimately be determined by the School Committee and City Council.

"Lincoln-Hancock is pretty full. Montclair is pretty full. A lot of people from the other side of the expressway go all the way over to Montclair. When you really look at the boundaries and the geography of the city, those kids probably travel the furthest to get to elementary school, so to me it is a natural to make it an elementary school," Koch said.

"There are other people who might think we should do a special school and not ship so many people out on special ed. Some people think do we do another early childhood center and just make it all pre-k and k. Some people may have other ideas."

Superintendent Names New Atlantic, Merrymount Principals

By SCOTT JACKSON

The educators who served as the acting principals at two of the city's public schools during the most recent school year have been hired as the full-time principals.

Aliza Schneller is the new principal at Atlantic Middle School and Courtney Mitchell is the new principal at Merrymount Elementary School, Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro announced in letters to each school community.

DeCristofaro said the two educators had been "focused on strengthening the school culture and enhancing the educational opportunities for all students" while serving as acting principals during the last school year and would continue that focus going forward.

Schneller was named acting principal at Atlantic in December 2018. She had been the assistant principal at Point Webster Middle School since September 2014. Prior to that, Schneller was the chair of the Foreign Language Department at North Quincy High School, where she taught French. Schneller has a Bachelor of Arts degree from Duke University and as Master of Education and Certificate of Advanced Educational Specialization in education administration from Boston College.

Mitchell was named acting principal at Merrymount in February. She had served as the assistant principal at Sterling Middle School (now the South-West Middle School) since September 2013. Previously, she was a guidance counsellor at Sterling for 12 years and a classroom teacher for four years at Point Webster and the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. She had also been the coordinator of the middle school extended day programs since 2017. Mitchell has a Bachelor of Arts degree from Assumption College and a Master of Education from Cambridge College.

Laura Owens, the assistant to the superintendent, said the vacant assistant principal positions at Point Webster and South-West Middle Schools will be posted through Aug. 8. Interviews for those positions would likely take place the following week.

Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of July 21st, 2019

- Watermain piping will be installed along the east edge of the Hancock Garage and backfilling will take place afterwards to raise up the elevation in that area. Once this area has been brought up, the watermain and drainage piping will continue around the front of the lower level of the garage.
- There will be a concrete pour towards the end of the week for the new MassDOT retaining wall along the backside of TJ Maxx as part of the Generals Bridge project on Burgin Parkway. The contractor will also be installing utilities in the area as the work on the west side is expected to be completed this year.
- All deck forms over the lower level of the new garage in the civic area have been installed. The contractor is working on buttoning up small openings, installing rebar and installing the post tension cables as they prepare for the first pour for half of the slab during the week of the 28th.
- As the new City garage, Nova Residence building, atrium and civic space are working towards opening up this fall, the vehicular traffic in this area will be busier with deliveries coming into the different sites. The work on the new Chestnut Place 15-story building will continue as well with an anticipation opening date of fall of 2020.

Norfolk 2nd Quarter RE Activity Mixed

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell reports second quarter (April-June 2019) real estate statistics showed a slight decrease in residential and commercial sales, while mortgage lending numbers experienced a small uptick and foreclosures were way down.

"The second quarter figures showed an overall 1% reduction in the number of properties sold countywide from 4,971 to 4,918 for the same quarter of 2018," O'Donnell said. "The flat real estate sales tell us there are still challenges when it comes to real estate inventory. It has been an ongoing issue and one that certainly needs to be watched closely."

O'Donnell also noted the recently concluded second quarter also saw the average Norfolk County real estate sales price, for both residential and commercial properties, decrease 11% to $776,889. Total dollar real estate volume, again for both residential and commercial, was $2.4 billion, a 16% decline year over year. These figures were impacted by the $177 million sale of Steward Norwood Hospital that took place on June 28, 2018, he said.

For the second quarter 2019, the number of land documents recorded, (such as deeds, mortgages, Homesteads, mortgage discharges, etc.) was 37,019, a slight 1% drop-off from the previous year. "This relatively flat figure tells us we have a ways to go before we see robust growth in the real estate market," O'Donnell said.

One good piece of positive news was the 7,108 mortgages recorded at the Registry in the second quarter compared to 6,826 for the same time period in 2018. Additionally, total mortgage borrowing was $3.8 billion for the second quarter compared to $4 billion during the second quarter 2018. "With the reduction in interest rates, consumers seem to be more comfortable when it comes to borrowing money," O'Donnell said.

Norfolk County homeowners continued to benefit from the Homestead Act, O'Donnell said. A total of 3,396 Homesteads were recorded during the 2nd quarter, a 1% increase year over year.

"The Homestead law provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I urge Norfolk County residents to consider this important consumer protection tool," O'Donnell said.

Foreclosure activity in Norfolk County showed signs of improvement. A total of 27 foreclosure deeds were recorded versus 48 filed during the 2nd quarter of 2018. In addition, there was a significant 38% drop in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process.

"One foreclosure is one too many, and while the eastern Massachusetts economy remains on a solid footing, there are still those in Norfolk County experiencing economic hardships," O'Donnell said noting the Registry continues to work with Quincy Community Action Programs, (617-479-8181 x376), and NeighborWorks Housing Solutions, (508-587-0950) to help homeowners who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage document. A third option is to contact the MA Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (CARD) at 617-727-8400.

"While real estate sales were mostly flat during the recently concluded quarter, a cause for optimism was the uptick in lending numbers," O'Donnell said. "A continuing strong economy in eastern Massachusetts and the possibility of further interest rate cuts as signaled by Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell to congressional committees should bode well for the overall real estate market going forward."

Furnishing A Long, Narrow Living Room

It's time to replace the furniture in my long, narrow living room. I've never been happy with the layout we have. There is only one wall where I can place a sofa as there are many windows, doors/doorways and a fireplace along the perimeter. Could you please offer some advice? The D Family Furnishing a long and narrow family space can be challenging. Most importantly, don't place furniture entirely up against one or two opposing walls. This creates a tunnel effect which is neither cozy nor welcoming.

First, pull furniture away from the wall. Instead of replacing your sofa, consider a love seat or two, or even four easy chairs in the middle of the room. These chairs can all be the same chair, or same style with two different fabrics with a round ottoman or round coffee table completing the arrangement. If you place the furniture crosswise in the room, your space will appear wider, too. Next, use circular or oval items to soften the long straight lines of your room. Examples include a round mirror, oval end tables, even artwork and drapery fabrics that have a circle or curve pattern. Also, create separate zones to help diminish the room's length. Set up a reading nook, computer station, or game table in one area. The best way to create independent spaces is with an area rug for each zone.

Other ideas include placing an L-shaped sectional sofa in one corner, arranging furniture on an angle, or using the vertical space in your room to draw your eye up instead of down the long room. The latter can be achieved with tall bookcases, a stacked art arrangement, or even vertical striped wallpaper. Conversely, introduce a horizontal element along one narrow wall with large painted stripes or shiplap (or shiplap wallpaper!). By doing so, the room will look wider and not as long.

Weinstein was interviewed by Quincy High School student Emily Leong who recorded his memory of watching the moonwalk while at camp.

"I was in a cafeteria with about 1,000 other kids watching TV," said Weinstein. "I think it was the biggest gathering anywhere watching the moon landing."

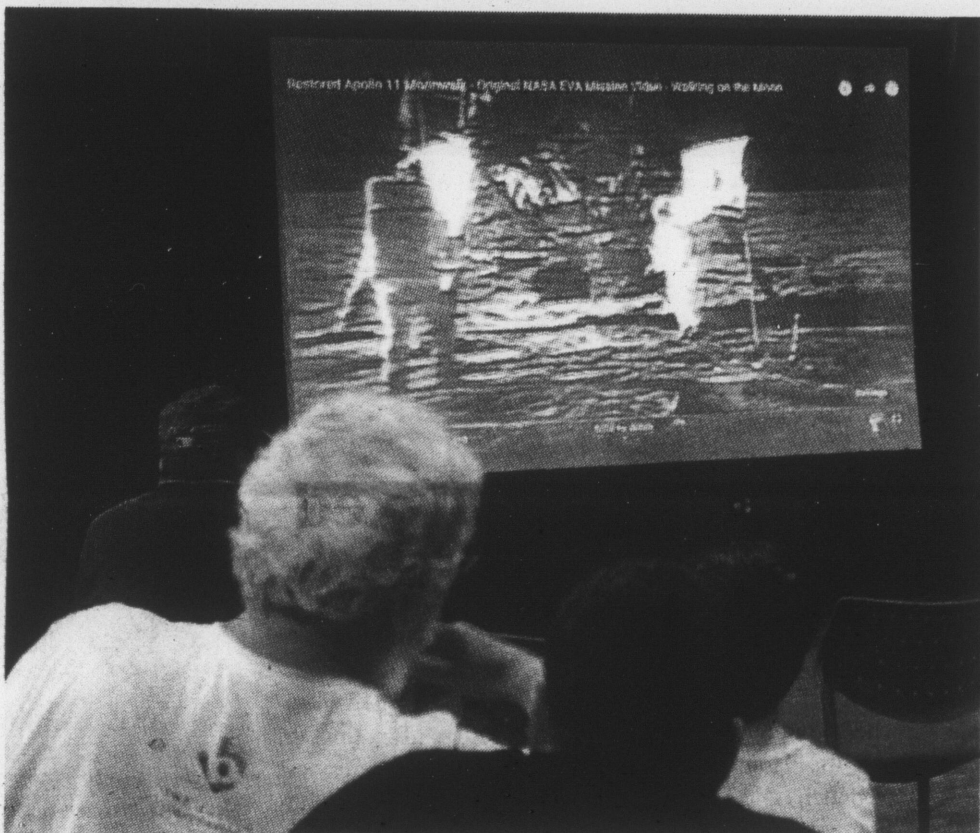

He said the cafeteria erupted in excitement when astronaut Neil Armstrong placed his foot on the lunar surface.

"We all stood up and cheered," Weinstein said.

Children's Librarian Samantha Small said the library event allowed children who were born long after the historic lunar mission to share in the excitement of the historic mission. Children created space helmets, searched for space terminology on an "astronaut training" guide, and used Virtual Reality goggles where they could "walk" on the moon's surface with the 3D technology.

"They can climb the moon's mountains and see the Earth from the moon," she said. "There was one was grateful Quincy would be the first city in the United States to take part in the occasion.

"People of Quincy, thank you for being founding mothers of Fair Saturday in the United States," he said. "I'm sure John Quincy Adams would have loved your vision and commitment, of your compliments and your kindness as human beings, for opening your heart to a simple man's idea."

"This is our quest in life," Albareda added, "to make as many people as possible think about a more humanized future in this time of materialism, pragmatism and increasing global selfishness, to celebrate the role of arts and culture and make a life mission of millions of artists devoted to healing the world through beauty, to show loud and clear that we are proud of the thousands and thousands of social entities working for the humankind and that we need them."

Mayor Thomas Koch was among the other dignitaries who spoke at the wreath-laying ceremony. Koch said John Quincy Adams was far ahead of his time in terms of his intellect and principle.

"It has been said that he had the highest IQ of any president by far," Koch said. "I really think of two words — one is intellect and one is principle."

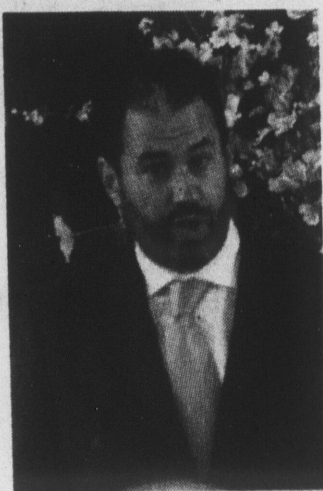

The mayor said Adams' greatest accomplishments came during his tenure as secretary of state under President James Monroe; it was Adams who authored the Monroe Doctrine, a tenet of American foreign policy still in place today.

Koch also commended Adams' service in Congress following his tenure in the White House. Adams was a fervent opponent of slavery during his time on Capitol Hill, leading to the repeal of the "gag rule" that prevented representatives from discussing the abolition of slavery. Adams and Abraham Lincoln also voted against entering into the Mexican-American War.

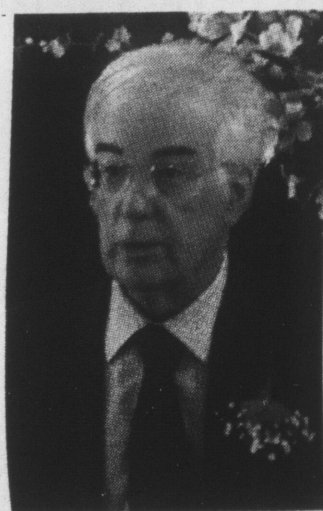

Adams is just one member of his family who entered public service over the years, the mayor noted. Those include Charles Francis Adams III, who served as the fourth mayor of Quincy and later the secretary of the Navy under Herbert Hoover.

"Today is a great day to remember John Quincy Adams. It also a great day to remember the public service that has been contributed by the Adams family generation after generation," Koch said.

"Today, we have turned our attention toward the life and the legacy of President John Quincy Adams. We have turned our attention to his work for justice, for equity and for compassion, and we have turned attention to how those movements for justice, equity and compassion are present in our world and in our city today," she said.

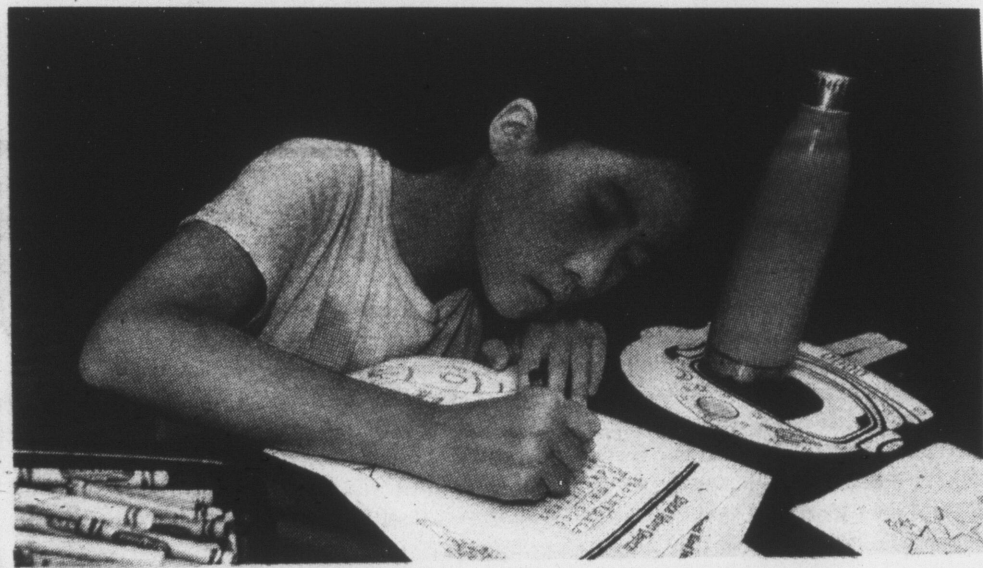

"May we go forth from here inspired by the highest ideals that we share with John Quincy Adams."

Morrisette Advances To Championship Game

By TREVOR WENNERS

The Morrisette Post 294 baseball team has proven that it can win games in different ways during the American Legion District 6 playoffs.

In the opening game on Friday, July 19, Morrisette outlasted Canton, 1-0, and then during Game 2 on July 20, Post 294 battled through the heat with a six-run second inning during a thrilling 7-5 win over Hyde Park Post 78 in the double-elimination playoff tournament at Adams Field.

With the win, Quincy (16-4) improved to 2-0 in the playoffs, while Post 78 (14-5) suffered its first loss in the tournament after defeating Norwood, 3-2, on July 19. Quincy and Hyde Park finished first and second overall, respectively, in the East Division during the regular season, as the two squads embarked in a 12-inning affair on July 15 with Quincy prevailing, 4-3.

Morrisette continued its winning ways Sunday defeating Franklin, 4-1. The victory put Morrisette in the championship game Tuesday night at Braintree High School after The Sun went to press.

"It is a healthy rivalry against Hyde Park," said Quincy coach Steve Maze after Morrisette's win Saturday. "The kids from Hyde Park play hard and my kids know them because a couple of them go to school together. It makes for a good rivalry. It is about who is better than who (on a given day)."

Quincy finished with 12 hits, as Post 294 shared the wealth among Michael Roche (3 for 4, two singles, double, RBI, run), Curtis Frazier (3 for 4, two singles, double, run), Zachary Hatfield (2 for 2, two singles, walk, two RBIs, run) and John Joyce (2 for 3, two singles, walk, run).

On the mound, Post 294 starter John MacDonald earned the win in 4 2/3 innings, finishing with seven strikeouts, including striking out the side in the fourth. He allowed four runs with three being earned on six hits, while walking three and hitting two. Owen Carberry was strong in 2 1/3 innings of relief, giving up one earned run on two hits in the sixth, but he posted a crucial 1-2-3 seventh after Hyde Park pulled to within two in the sixth.

Leading the way in the batting order for Post 78 was leadoff hitter Reo Shimbori (2 for 4, two singles, two runs) and No. 2 hitter Sam Petitpas (2 for 4, two singles).

During the top of the first, Shimbori and Petitpas exchanged back-to-back singles for the visitors, and then Shimbori scored on an RBI ground out to second by Sean Russell, giving the unit an early 1-0 advantage.

Quincy put together a highlight-reel second inning, sending 11 batters to the plate, scoring six runs, tallying five hits, and drawing a pair of walks. A two-run single through the right side with no outs by Hatfield gave Quincy the lead for good at 2-1. During the next at-bat, leadoff hitter Matthew Joyce recorded an RBI ground out to second, and then Martin McCormack clobbered a one-run triple over the center fielder's head, making the score, 4-1. The rally continued with McCormack scoring on a wild pitch, and it concluded with a two-out, RBI single to center by William McCarthy, pushing the lead up to 6-1.

"The first three times we played Hyde Park we struggled to get runs against them so that was huge for us to get six runs in the second," said MacDonald. "It allowed me to be confident on the mound, throw strikes, and let my defense make plays for me."

Connor Bertsch responded for Hyde Park in the third with a one-out triple to right, and then scored during the following at-bat on a wild pitch, trimming the deficit down to 6-2.

Quincy regained a five-run cushion in the fourth, as Frazier ripped a leadoff double to left-center, and then Roche sent him across home with an RBI single up the middle.

Post 78 refused to go away and kept chipping away in the fifth. With two outs and the bases loaded, Kevin Bruen drew an RBI walk. Next up was John McMahon, who sent a ground ball to third, and a fielding error allowed Russell to race across home, cutting the deficit down to 7-4.

All of a sudden in the sixth it was a two-run game as a result of a sacrifice fly to center by Post 78's Eric Wainwright, which scored Shimbori. Carberry threw a sensational seventh, not giving Hyde Park any momentum by retiring the side in order.

"You got to throw strikes if you are a relief pitcher," said Maze. "When Carberry comes in he throws strikes, and it was huge (Saturday)."

AAA: Vehicle Escape Tools are a Lifesaver — In The Right Situation

New research from AAA reveals that most vehicle escape tools, intended to quickly aid passengers trapped in a car following an accident, will break tempered side windows, but none were able to penetrate laminated glass.

Motorists may not realize it, but an increasing number of new cars — in fact, 1 in 3 2018 vehicle models — have laminated side windows, a nearly unbreakable glass meant to lessen the chance of occupant ejection during a collision. AAA urges drivers to know what type of side window glass is installed on their vehicle, keep a secure and easily accessible escape tool in their car and have a backup plan in case an escape tool cannot be used or doesn't work.

In its latest study, AAA examined a selection of vehicle escape tools available to consumers to determine their effectiveness in breaking tempered and laminated vehicle side windows. Of the six tools selected (three spring-loaded and three hammer style), AAA researchers found that only four were able to shatter the tempered glass and none were able to break the laminated glass, which stayed intact even after being cracked. During multiple rounds of testing, it was also discovered that the spring-loaded tools were more effective in breaking tempered windows than the hammer-style.

"To improve safety, more vehicles are being equipped with laminated side windows — but a majority also have at least one window made of tempered glass," said John Paul, senior manager of Traffic Safety at AAA Northeast. "Our research found that generally vehicle escape tools can be effective in an emergency, but only if drivers know what type of side windows they have, otherwise they could waste precious seconds trying to break glass that will not shatter."

Drivers can determine the type of glass installed on their vehicle by first checking for a label located in the bottom corner of the side window, which should clearly indicate whether the glass is tempered or laminated. If this information is not included or there is no label at all, AAA advises contacting the vehicle manufacturer. It is also important to note that some vehicles are outfitted with different glass at varying locations in the car (i.e. tempered glass on rear side windows versus laminated on front side windows).

The increased use of laminated glass is in response to federal safety standards aimed at reducing occupant ejections in high speed collisions. In 2017, there were an estimated 21,400 people who were partially or fully ejected during a crash, resulting in 11,200 injuries and 5,053 deaths. While these types of crashes are more prevalent, there are instances where vehicles may catch fire or become partially or fully submerged in water, forcing drivers and their passengers to exit the vehicle through a side window. In situations like this, vehicle escape tools can assist ahead of emergency responders arriving.

Vehicle escape tools come in many varieties, but AAA suggests avoiding tools with extra features such as lights or chargers since these functions do not improve the performance of the tool itself. Drivers should also remember that in the event their vehicle is submerged, a hammer-style escape tool (as opposed to a spring-loaded-style) will be ineffective underwater.

"Drivers should pick a tool they feel comfortable with and find easy to use, but most importantly they should store it somewhere that is secure and within reach following a collision," added Mr. Paul.

Being prepared in an emergency can greatly improve the chances of survival, especially if drivers and

Despite a 7-7 tie at halftime, the Blaze used a four-goal run in the third quarter to fuel a 15-12 win over the Cannons at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday. The Cannons pulled it close late in the fourth, but late penalties and turnovers hurt Boston as they go 1-1 versus Atlanta for 2019.

"I think a big thing [in] this game was unforced turnovers. We had quite a few of those," said Cannons Head Coach Sean Quirk. "Giving them those possessions, Atlanta's got a great offense, so they capitalized off that. And then ground-ball opportunities. Groundballs are possessions, possessions are goals, and goals are wins. We just didn't win that battle today. We got to play a little bit tougher and bounce back from this one."

The Cannons started the first quarter on a four-goal run, with Will Sands opening the scoring with his eighth goal of the season 3:08 into the game. Connor O'Hara put the Cannons up 2-0 a little over two minutes later after defenseman PT Ricci rushed the field in transition, creating the scoring opportunity. John Uppgren faked out Chris Madalon to bury his sixth of the season with 7:57 left, and then Mark Cockerton scored his team-leading 25th goal of the season to put the Cannons up 4-0.

Atlanta scored its first goal of the game with 4:37 left, as long-pole Leo Stouros beat Nick Marrocco on a fast shot from just inside the two-point arc to end Boston's run. Christian Mazzone cut the Cannons' lead in half after taking the ball to the cage on a run in from behind the goal with 4:00 left.

The Cannons responded with a big shift from Zach Goodrich and James Leary. After the two rushed the ball out of the defensive zone, Leary fed Goodrich, who wrapped it around the Atlanta goal before firing his third of the season through Madalon. This gave the Cannons a 5-2 lead at the end of one.

After Matthew Whitcher scored to cut the Cannons' lead to 5-3 early in the second, O'Hara tallied his 20th goal of the season to give Boston a 6-3 lead with 9:10 left in the quarter. Then, Atlanta scored the four of the last five goals in the second to make the score 7-7 at the half, with tallies from Colton Jackson, Randy Staats, TJ Comizio, and Bryan Cole.

After some back and forth action to start the third, the Blaze finally found the back of the net with 10:47 left, as Shayne Jackson scored to give Atlanta its first lead of the night. The Cannons turned the ball over with the defense out of position. Boston responded with a nifty between-the-legs goal from Zed Williams and a rushing goal by Sands to take a 9-8 lead with 6:32 remaining in the quarter.

Tommy Palasek tied the game with 2:33 to play in the third, and scored twice more in the next 1:11 to give Atlanta an 11-9 lead. Jackson buried his second of the quarter with 44 seconds left to give the Blaze a 12-9 lead through three quarters.

"We knew they were a good team," said Marrocco. "We tried to play more of a full game, offensively and defensively, but obviously it's a game of runs. We had a run at one point, and we knew they were going to go on a run, and they did. It's lacrosse. That's what happens. They got a couple lucky bounces. Unfortunately, we didn't come out on top."

Staats scored his second of the game at 10:31 of the fourth to give the Blaze a 13-9 lead. Atlanta rushed the field and made a few quick passes to get around the Boston defense before Staats put the ball in the back of the net. The Cannons responded less than a minute later on Williams' second of the night, as the midfielder caught a blooper pass from Cockerton and found a lane to shoot through Madalon to pull within three.

Challen Rogers scored the next two goals for the Cannons to make it a one-goal game with 4:45 left, but the Blaze capped off the game with two goals from Jackson in the last 2:23 to earn the win.

With the loss, the Cannons fall to 5-3 on the season with the All-Star Break next week. The Cannons will use this time to rest up and get healthy so everyone is prepared when games resume on August 3.

"Going into the All-Star Break, you get some rest," said Quirk. "You regroup a little bit and refocus. The last two weeks, playing four games, it's a grind. We just got to be ready to go come the second half of the season for sure."

The Cannons will be represented by Cockerton, Kyle Denhoff, James Fahey, Goodrich, Marrocco, Justin Pugal, Ryland Rees, and Kevin Reisman in the All-Star Game next weekend. Denhoff, Fahey, and Reisman are all currently on injured reserve, but news regarding their All-Star status will be posted on BostonCannons.com and MajorLeagueLacrosse.com.

The Cannons return to action on Saturday, Aug. 3 in Denver, CO at Mile High Stadium.

AAA Approved Auto Repair Facilities, Low Tire Light, Batteries

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

A friend of mine owns a 2004 Ford F-150. On Friday the truck wouldn't start so he had it towed to his usual repair shop. The shop told him that he needs a new timing chain but was honest enough to say that the job is beyond their capabilities. Do you know of any highly regarded independent repair shops that specialize in Ford truck repairs that could perform the job?

It is good to see that the shop acknowledges their limitations. I have seen too many times that a technician will get in over their head on a repair. The repair itself is an all-day job and the along with the timing chain and gears the chain tensioners should also be replaced. A good technician will also look for wear in other components and recommend replacement. To find a AAA Approved Auto Repair facility near you go to aaa.com/autorepair.

I have a 2012 Ford Fusion with 33,000 miles. Just about every four weeks the low tire light goes on the dashboard. When the light comes on, I put air in tires. My mechanic told me it is the rim of the tire causing this problem. It is becoming a nuisance. Do you think I need new tires?

The tires are mounted on the rims/wheels and the rims/wheels are mounted on the car. At seven years old it is entirely possible the car needs new tires. But as your mechanic pointed out it is the seal between the tire and the wheels where there is a problem. Depending on the overall condition of the wheels, they may be able to be cleaned and sealed using a commercial tire bead sealer. I have seen many times this offer a permanent solution and the leak will be eliminated.

I have a 2013 Subaru Outback and it remained parked outside all winter. I had to jump start it, but once started, it ran just fine. However, the car continues to start hard, acting as though the battery is low. I took it to a local auto shop and their tech tested the starter, the alternator and the battery and found them all to be functioning properly. He suggested I drive it for a few hours to charge up the battery fully. I did, but it still starts very sluggishly, when it starts at all. Any advice you can offer would be greatly appreciated.

The typical life of a battery in the Northeast is about five years. If the battery in your Subaru is original, it may be time for replacement. I also question the technician's comment about driving around to charge the battery. The proper method to charge a battery is to use a battery charger. A vehicle alternator is designed to maintain a battery not completely recharge a low battery. Subaru vehicles have had battery issues the past few years, if you are replacing the battery in your car, use the highest capacity battery available.

My car is a 2012 Honda Pilot with 57,000 miles on it. I had a brake inspection performed at the Honda dealer and they said the front brakes are almost worn out and they recommend new front brake rotors with the new brake pads. The rear brakes are also nearly worn out, but they only recommended the brake pads on the rear. At this mileage is this normal wear and does it sound like the correct repairs?

It is not unusual to replace brake pads at any mileage over 40,000 miles (sports cars and heavy duty vehicles brake wear can be much faster). If the front brake rotors show any signs of wear or vibration when stopping replacing rather than resurfacing the brake rotors is money well spent. The rear brakes are far less likely to cause vibration and don't need to be replaced as often. It sounds like the dealer is being careful how they are spending your money.

I recently got married and purchased a house, now I'm going to be a dad. I can't resign myself to driving a typical family car. I'm thinking of a vintage Volkswagen van. What do you think of this idea?

Congratulations on all the changes in your life. I remember the Volkswagen vans fondly but recently had the opportunity to drive a very nicely restored 1965 and then my memory got a bit clearer. They are underpowered, handle poorly, don't stop well and have no safety features that are so common in any car today. There are great choices in SUVs and minivans, but perhaps a European wagon would work. The VW Golf Alltrack, Audi A4, Volvo V60 and Buick TourX can handle New England winters and are fun to drive.

I recently came across a vintage low-mileage Cadillac Eldorado with a hole in the oil pan. The car has sat for years because the owner couldn't find parts to fix it. They don't want a lot of money for the car. What do you think of taking a chance and buying this car? Other than the engine it looks to be in good condition.

I have seen many cars that have been tucked away with low miles that look like great deals. The problem is they were usually put away because they were broken. An engine with a damaged oil pan could have been run out of oil and have become badly damaged. I would only buy this car if you are prepared to rebuild the engine.

At some point gas prices will climb again and I was thinking about a Toyota Prius. The one thing that has always kept me from buying a Prius is the lack of all-wheel-drive. I want a car and not an SUV and most SUVs don't gain that much more in miles per gallon being a hybrid. I understand Toyota has introduced an all-wheel-drive Prius. Have you driven it and what do you think?

I have always been a fan of the Prius; it is practical, economical and easy to drive. I recently drove the all-wheel-drive Prius and it felt just like a conventional Prius. I didn't drive it in the snow but tried it in a few inches of sand and it worked great. In addition, according to the onboard computer I never saw less than 60 miles per gallon.

I ran out of gas with my sister's Jeep, fortunately I was within walking distance of a gas station. I "rented" a gas can from the gas station ($20 plus gas) and walked back to the Jeep and found the I couldn't get the spout in the "cap-less" gas tank. What is up with the stupid design? I'm not a AAA member - if I was could I have got gas delivered?

Several manufactures are using cap-less fuel system, which makes filling easier while still preventing fumes from escaping to the air. Somewhere in the Jeep there is a small funnel which is designed to allow easy filling with a gas can. Yes, if you had AAA, we would have delivered gas to your out of fuel vehicle.

I get a chatter/clicking feeling in the steering wheel of my old Audi I share with my brother - we are both in college. This noise only happens when I'm driving around a tight curve or turning into a parking spot. This is the only time this happens, never while driving straight or on the highways.

The noise could be related to a worn wheel bearing, worn tire but most likely a worn constant velocity joint. Have a repair shop take a look at all of the steering and suspension components, paying particular attention to the wheel bearings and the C/V joints. If they do find a worn C/V joint it is generally more economical to replace the entire axle.

The lease on my Hyundai is coming to an end. I noticed a small round chip on the front window, the size of the tip of an eraser on a pencil. Some friends have advised that I replace the windshield, or I will be charged for this chip by the leasing company. Others have said if it is that small not to bother. I called Hyundai and they were of no help in giving me advice. Do you think I should replace the windshield to avoid a financial penalty for this chip?

In most cases the lease agreement will spell out what is considered normal wear and tear. I was looking at a lease agreement on an Audi recently and it required that the tires had a minimum tread depth, paint damage couldn't be bigger than a typical business card and the windshield had to be free of chips in the wiper area. I this were my car I would consider having the windshield repaired, not replaced. The cost is minimal, in fact some insurance companies will pay for glass repair. I have had many windshields repairs over the years and the results have been very good.

In a recent column, you said to put the wheels back in the same place when performing a brake repair to keep the tire pressure system accurate. We have two new Toyotas with TPMS (tire pressure monitoring systems) and I have rotated the tires three or four times and had no problem. Is it a different case with different car makers?

There are two basic types of tire pressure monitoring systems, direct and indirect. The direct system uses transmitters in each wheel. The cars' TPMS computer knows the location of each tire and the pressure of each tire. On this type of vehicle when the tires are rotated the TPMS system needs to be told, what tire is in what position. On the indirect system, the anti-lock brake system is used to measure tire pressure, by measuring tire size. A tire with low pressure will roll at a different rate than a fully inflated tire. On this system you are alerted that your vehicle has a low tire, but it is up to the operator to determine which tire is low. The direct system is more accurate, but it has a specific life and over time the sensors need replacement. The indirect system will work properly as long as the anti-lock brake system is operational.

I have a 2011 Lexus RX 350 with 184,000 miles on it. For the past couple of years, the "high transmission fluid temp" warning has been coming on and off sporadically during extended highway travel. It used to come on and go off on its own a few minutes later, but now, it usually doesn't go off until I shut the car off and start it back up. I took it in to the Lexus dealer three different times during the first year this happened and every time they advised me that they couldn't find anything wrong with the car and that it was safe to drive. On a couple recent occasions, the light flashed on and off repeatedly and the engine slowed down slightly with the engine speed going higher. The first time this happened, another automatic transmission warning (I can't recall exactly what it said) came on as well. I immediately went to a service station and they ran a computer check and couldn't find anything wrong other than I think they said the warning lights were malfunctioning. They said there were no other signs (odor, racing, etc.) of transmission issues. The car ran fine when I started it again. I subsequently took it to my regular service station, and they found no problems, but they replaced the transmission fluid. Recently, the "high transmission fluid temp" light flashed again with the engine slowing down and the engine RPMs in-their passengers have become trapped in the vehicle. AAA strongly recommends drivers do the following:

AAA's Car Doctor

Prepare ahead of time:

- Memorize the type of glass the vehicle windows are made of - tempered or laminated. If the car has at least one tempered window, this will be the best point of exit in an emergency. Also, remember - standard escape tools will not break laminated glass.

- Keep an escape tool in the car that the driver is comfortable using, has previously tested and is easy to access following a collision. To make sure a vehicle escape tool is working properly, test it ahead of time on a softer surface such as a piece of soft wood. The tool works if the tip impacts the surface, leaving a small indent in the material.

- Plan an exit strategy in advance and communicate it to everyone in the car. This will help avoid confusion in an emergency, which could increase the time it takes to exit the vehicle. Also, have a backup plan in case an escape tool cannot be used or doesn't work.

If trapped in a vehicle, remember there is a S-U-R-E way out:

- Stay calm. While time is of the essence - work cautiously to ensure everyone safely exits the vehicle.

- Unbuckle seat belts and check to see that everyone is ready to leave the car when it's time.

- Roll down or break a window - remember if the car is sinking in water, once the window is open the water will rush into the car at a faster rate. If the window will not open and the car has tempered glass, use an escape tool to break a side window to escape. Drivers should also remember that:

- o If a window will not open or cannot be broken because it is laminated, everyone should move to the back of the vehicle or wherever an air pocket is located. Stay with it until all of the air has left the vehicle. Once this happens, the pressure should equalize, allowing occupants to open a door and escape.

- o If the vehicle is submerged, a hammer-style escape tool (as opposed to a spring-loaded-style) could be much harder to swing underwater.

- Exit the vehicle quickly and move everyone to safety.

- Call 911 - while this is typically the first step in an emergency, if a vehicle has hit the water or is on fire, it is best to try to escape first.

creasing again. I pulled over and the next time I started up the car, the warning lights were out and it ran fine. I am getting very nervous that my transmission is failing. Have you heard of this issue happening with other RX 350's? Do you have any idea what could be causing it and what I should do?

Higher than normal transmission fluid temperatures can be detrimental to the life of a transmission, which is why some manufacturers use temperature sensors and warning lights. Since the light goes out after a restart, I suspect the issue is electrical rather than mechanical. The problem could be with the transmission module, sensors or wiring. At this point a technician will need to check each circuit as well as any computer codes to find the problem.

I was hoping you could shed some light on this. My husband brought his car to our dealer (Honda) for an oil change. The technicians suggested other work, mostly oil/lubrication. The car was there 2.25 hours with a $400 labor charge at the end, the total bill was $800. We were in shock! We disputed the labor charge; we were told an extra mechanic was used and this is the normal. We aren't young kids, and this has never happened to us. What do you think?

There are three methods to calculate labor for repairs. Menu pricing, straight labor and flat-rate labor. Most shops use a combination of menu-board pricing and flat rate times. In the flat rate system, the vehicle manufacturer performs time studies for repairs. In this case the customer is charged the flat rate time, regardless if the repairs are performed quicker or take longer than the scheduled time. Some shops will use the "pit-crew" approach to work more efficiently saving the customer time. Consumers should always ask for an estimate before repairs are performed and if there is any doubt, ask for a thorough explanation of all the fees for both parts and labor.

I have a 2016 Mazda CX-5 which I bought used in 2017 at a used car superstore and it is approaching its 30,000-mile maintenance. I have had all my cars serviced at a local AAA facility for decades. Recently I replaced the Mazda's tires at a great tire store, where I have also purchased tires for the last 30 years. I also had the Mazda's infotainment system updated under warranty at a local dealership. Both the tire store and the dealer have contacted me about the pending service. My question is where should I get the service performed? All seem trustworthy and reputable.

The 30,000 mile service is a series of simple checks combined with, an oil change, cabin air filter replacement and tire rotation. Since you have a good relationship with the AAA facility I would return their for service. They know the vehicle and more importantly they know you and what you expect from your car.

Recently in Consumer Reports there was a notice about a Ford recall, of 1.26 million 2011-2013 F-150 6-speed transmission trucks for a software issue that may cause unexpected downshift to first gear while vehicle is in motion; the fix CR reported would be a software update. Later I saw a reported recall of the 2013 models for this problem. Because I have heard irregular "clunks" at times over the last year or so during automatic shifting I thought maybe this issue explains it, and since the report I've seen my transmission downshift twice with the clunk, but it has downshifted to third gear, not first gear. But I contacted my dealership and the service manager told me that my vehicle is not listed in the recall, so it is not eligible for the free fix. I was annoyed by the manager's answer because he did not follow up with a suggestion of what else could be done for my problem. Since I spoke to the manager, I've wondered if they have a software analysis tool that would detect the problem if it indeed exists in my truck. I haven't gotten through to Ford's Customer Service. What do you advise? Do you think I am right to feel unsatisfied?

The recall for the Ford trucks was very specific for a dramatic downshift to first gear and the repair is a software update. That being said, there has been several updates to the transmission software of Ford vehicles and some of those updates may correct the issue with your truck. I would have the dealer check to see if there are any software updates that may apply. Keep in mind that unless you have an extended service contract/warranty on your truck, you will be responsible for the repairs.

I am considering changing the transmission fluid on my 2011 Toyota Camry. There is no transmission dipstick and the car has 48,000 miles on it. My question is, when should it be done, and where? Is the dealer better for this than an independent auto repair service center? I also heard flushing out the transmission is better than a drain and refill since you never completely drain all of the fluid from the transmission. Any answers would be helpful.

Both an independent shop or dealer could change the fluid in your Toyota, only Toyota fluid should be used. Personally, I prefer a fluid exchange over a partial drain and refill. That being said, unless the transmission is leaking fluid or the car is used as a taxi, I wouldn't change the fluid. Under "the normal maintenance table" Toyota doesn't list a mileage to replace the fluid and only periodic checks of fluid level.

Christian Camp Sunday At Quincy Point Congregational

Dress down this week and come enjoy the casual, bug free "Old Time Christian Camp Sunday" during the 10 a.m. worship on July 28 at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. in the air-conditioned sanctuary.

Rev. Kimberly said: "For those of us lucky to have attended Summer Camp, it was the best of times...and the worst of times. Lots of fun, lots of bugs, dubious indoor plumbing. The fun part, at least for me, (and especially when I returned as a counselor) were some of the songs I learned and the casual atmosphere of worshipping in the Great Outdoors.

"The worship was no less meaningful, as I discovered; there was something about having that kind of casual service that made things more fun."

Ron Grabke will read the scripture and Angela

Let will be the soloist of the day. The sanctuary is accessible to all with designated parking and an elevator via the Abbey Road side of the building.

After worship in the downstairs Social Hall there will be light refreshments (maybe some camp snacks) and fellowship.

all doubts once you're able to present a solid defense backed up by equally solid facts.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Now that Disney has remade "Aladdin," "The Lion King" and sequels of "Toy Story 4" and "Frozen 2," it has turned to "Cruella," a live-action sequel to "101 Dalmatians," and a sequel to "The Little Mermaid." Originally Lindsey Lohan was cast as Ariel, but was replaced by Halle Bailey, and "This Is Us" star Chrissy Metz was replaced by Melissa McCarthy as Ursula. The role of her father, Triton, was to be played by Jeff Bridges and Prince Eric by Zac Efron, but they are not in the current plan. While "The Star Wars" sequels have been big winners for Disney, others have not. Take "Mary Poppins" (1965), which cost only $6 million to make and earned $103 million, five Oscar wins (including Julie Andrews) and a best-picture nomination, while "Mary Poppins Returns" cost $30 million and grossed $345 million. It didn't win any Oscars and didn't get a best-picture nomination. One of reasons may have been no hit songs. The original had at least four hits: "A Spoonful of Sugar," "Chim Chim Cher-ee," "Jolly Holiday" and "Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious." No hummable tunes, no repeat business.  "Ghostbusters 3" is set for July 2020, and will reunite most of the original cast -- Bill Murray, Sigourney Weaver, Dan Aykroyd, Ernie Hudson and Annie Potts -- and add Paul Rudd, with Jason Reitman, the son of original director Ivan Reit-man, at the helm. Dan Aykroyd promises, "This flick will connect to the first movie better than any other sequel and in a way that hasn't been done before." The 2016 film with an all-female cast earned $229 million against a $144 million cost. Is "Man of Steel" Henry Cavill turning in his cape for a pipe when he becomes Sherlock Holmes in "Enola Holmes"? He'll play Sherlock to Millie Bobby Brown's Enola Holmes (his much younger sister), which is based on a book by Nancy Springer. Is this the end of Superman as we know him? The 36-year-old Cavill has not been linked romantically to anyone since Ellen Whitaker, and he ended it in 2012.  Now that Robert Downey Jr.'s "Iron Man" was killed off in "The Avengers: Endgame," what's next? Downey played "Iron Man," aka Tony Stark, in 11 films in the Marvel Universe. Archival footage in "Spider-Man: Far From Home" paid tribute to him. Beyond the remake of "Doctor Dolittle," due Jan. 17, Downey Jr. is in the sports comedy "All-Star Weekend," which Jamie Foxx wrote, produced, directed and stars in, with Gerald Butler, Eva Longoria and Benicio Del Toro. We know Downey Jr. had superpowers, but can he and Foxx dribble competitively against NBA stars LeBron James and Steph Curry? (c) 2019 King Features Synd., Inc.

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Tazza Celadon --- There are many unfamiliar names for antiques and even vintage collectibles. What is a collectible "dumbwaiter," a "finger vase" or a "swift"? And what is a "tazza" and how was it used? The tazza originally was a large basin for bathing. But the meaning changed and by the 17th century -- perhaps earlier -- it became the name of a piece often used at a dinner party. It is a shallow bowl or platter that is on a stem or footed base. It was used to display or to serve small foods or even for drinking. In other words, it is a dish on a pedestal. The dish was decorated, and the pedestal was an elaborate and shapely piece of metal. Cakebread Auctions sold a tazza that was a celadon, a Chinese export porcelain dish, on a gilt-metal mount with scroll-shaped legs. The tazza sold for $1,615. If you're wondering, the dumbwaiter is a wooden stand with round trays of graduated sizes held by a center pole. It has been in use since the 1720s. The finger vase is a Dutch Delft vase with five tube-like holders for flowers arranged like the fingers on a hand. And a swift is an adjustable reel for winding yarn made of wood or ivory. ***

Q: I bought a rectangular glass dish with a lid at a garage sale. The owner said it came in a refrigerator she bought years ago. The sides are ribbed, and there are pictures of corn and other vegetables embossed on the lid. The dish is about 8 inches long, 3 inches wide, and 3 inches deep. What can you tell me about it?

over" dishes and were made in glass and pottery by several companies beginning in the 1920s and '30s. Some were given away with the purchase of a new refrigerator. Your glass dish was made by Federal Glass Company, which was in business in Columbus, Ohio, from 1900 to 1980. Federal made refrigerator dishes in rectangular and square shapes, in different sizes and colors, and with different embossed decorations. Not all Federal glass was marked, and marks on glass can be hard to find. Look for the letter "F" in a shield on the bottom of dishes. ***

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* To test the seals on your refrigerator and freezer, close a piece of paper in the door. If you can pull it out easily, it's likely that your seal is loose. Clean or replace door gaskets for a better seal.
* To clean the microwave, try adding the juice of half a lemon to a cup of water and setting to boil (four minutes) in the microwave. Let the steam circulate for an additional four minutes, then remove the cup and wipe down all sides of interior. Use the cut lemon to clean a wooden cutting board. * "Old flowerpots can be brought back to new life with a good scrub, a coat of paint and a healthy dose of sealant. This works especially well on pots with some detailing. The new paint and seal really bring out the decoration, and you can make a group of mish-mash pots have a cohesive look." -- M.W. in Oregon
* Packing small jewelry for a trip? Consider using a pill minder -- the plastic storage bins with seven days or more that are used to organize medicine. These work very well.

The answer is B. The exact answer is 1 out of 21.

On Monday, July 15, Officer Ryan Donnelly was conducting motor vehicle enforcement on Hancock Street when he observed a vehicle traveling at a high rate of speed south on Hancock Street. When he activated his cruiser's emergency blue lights and siren, the vehicle sped off, making a right turn onto West Squantum Street on the wrong side of the road.

Officer Donnelly notified Quincy Police Communications of the vehicle that was failing to stop, providing the make/partial license plate and that there were two males and three females inside. The vehicle continued on West Squantum Street towards Milton, then made an abrupt left turn to Harvard Street and then a quick right turn onto Holbrook Road.

The officer lost sight of the vehicle and updated Communications, who had dispatched numerous units to the area. Milton Police and State Police also saturated the area.

After a few minutes, a call came into Quincy Police Communications stating that a vehicle crashed through a fence and came to rest in the rear of 89 Elmwood Park. Two males and three females exited the vehicle and fled. Units already in the area stopped several people in proximity.

Officer Ford came across two females on Elliot Avenue and notified Officer Donnelly, who responded to his location and recognized one of the females as the passenger in the middle rear seat of the vehicle. He advised both women of their Miranda warnings which they understood. While talking to the two females, other officers radioed that they located two males and were detaining them. Moments later, other officers radioed that they were in foot pursuit of the fifth suspect, followed by a radio transmission that this suspect was now detained.

State Trooper Crowley stood by this suspect until Officer Donnelly arrived and confirmed that she was also in the suspect vehicle. She denied being in any vehicle and was visiting her sister at Anna Maria College (Paxton, MA - near Worcester) and got off the train. Sgt. Lencki had the witnesses brought to the scene and they confirmed that the two women were the same ones fleeing the vehicle.

Officer Donnelly contacted Communications to check for any information on the two females. One female was reported missing from Worcester and the other female had no warrants. Both females were transported to the station.

While waiting for a cruiser for transport, Detective Eddy noticed a male attempting to walk by the scene and asked him to stop. The male immediately fled into the back yards along Elliot Avenue but after a short foot chase this male was apprehended. Once this suspect was led back to where the two females were, he looked right at one of the females and yelled, "Caitlyn don't snitch," followed by, "Pow, Pow you better not be snitching on me." The male then turned to Sergeant Ward and said, "You guys are good. You caught me."

Officer McCormack arrived on scene and both females were placed into handcuffs. During a search for weapons before entering the cruiser, a Chrysler key fob the suspect vehicle was found on one of the females. Both females were transported to the Quincy Police station for processing. Officer Donnelly then went to the location of the suspect vehicle on Elmwood Park, where Officer Levine was conducting an inventory of the vehicle.

Officer Levine collected the following items from the suspect vehicle; 2 boxes of Goodsense fold top Sandwich bags, 3 small digital scales, 1 box of 9mm Luger ammu-

Marilyn L. Birnie, 77

A funeral Mass for Marilyn L. (Lewis) Birnie, age 77, of Quincy, was celebrated July 19 at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Birnie passed away peacefully July 13.

She was the beloved wife of Charles "Rod" Birnie; dear daughter of the late Charles and Helen Lewis; devoted mother of Heidi and her husband Stephen Cerullo of Norton and Rachel Meissner and her fiancé Robert Haley of Hingham; dear sister of Virginia Burbank of Quincy; and loving Grammy of Luke Cerullo and Abigail Meissner.

Mrs. Birnie was born in Dorchester and graduated from Cardinal Cushing High School. She was a graduate of Mary Brooks Junior College and later studied psychology at Bridgewater State College. She held many positions including medical secretary, teacher-training director of the Art Linkletter-Totten dance school, and then with her sister Gigi, ran the Hingham School of Dance.

Mrs. Birnie was an incredibly loving and supportive mother who was the first person you called to give good news, but also was the one who gave immense comfort, counsel and peace in the tough times. She was gifted with many talents; she was an artist, a musician and a dancer. She had that Irish sense of humor and could tell a great story, but what is most impressive is her strength and courage and her love for the Lord.

Many knew Mrs. Birnie through her life's work at "Friends of the Unborn," the ministry she founded in 1984. It's a long-term maternity shelter for women dealing with an unplanned pregnancy, who are in need of a safe haven and support. It started with just one girl, who came to live in her home. She may have been short on funds, but she was big on love, compassion and faith. Over time, "Friends" grew and support came pouring in. Mrs. Birnie's step of faith provided an opportunity for others to share their gifts as well, as the Lord prompted their hearts to support this ministry continuously for 35 years. "Friends" has served thousands of women and babies and transformed the lives of more people than we could ever know.

Mrs. Birnie also had a heart for the people of Kenya, Africa, after her husband Charles (Rod) founded Light of Christ Ministries in 1995. Together, they stepped out with great faith and ran a mission there for many years. During her time in Kenya, she answered the Lord's call to share the Gospel, feed and teach street children, and provide food for famine relief. Mrs. Birnie also continued her mission to aid homeless pregnant women in need.

She had a Christlike heart and trusted that if God had asked something of her, He would provide...and He did. And He does. "Friends" continues its lifesaving work today and it will continue, even now that this inspirational woman is longer with us. Her unwavering faith is a testament to all that with God's help, each one of us can be an Angel among us.

"Well done good and faithful servant." Matthew 25:23.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, 326 Granite Ave., Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to Friends of the Unborn, P.O. Box 692246, Quincy, MA 02269.

Arthur C.S. Choo, 91

A funeral Mass for Arthur C.S. Choo of Quincy was conducted Wednesday at United First Parish Church, Quincy.

Mr. Choo passed away of natural causes on July 16, at age 91 3/4. He was born on Oct. 19, 1927 in the British Colony of Singapore. He grew up impoverished.

As an 11-year-old boy he worked as a doorman at a hotel. A business man once told him that a young boy like that should not be working, and promised to one day send him to America. He was 15 when the Japanese invaded Singapore. His only choice was to allow his family to be persecuted and used as practice dummies in training drills, or to enlist in the Invading army.

He chose to enlist to protect his family. As an occupied country the food supply was controlled. Acting in his capacity as a soldier, he assisted in the smuggling of food into the country.

In 1948, he found the business man that had promised him passage to America and the businessman agreed to pay for Arthur's passage on a freighter, but only if he exported American toys back to Singapore for his resale. In 1948, he immigrated to San Diego with $100, to earn money to support his family in Singapore.

He wasn't qualified to be a dishwasher so he started as a pot washer, but was determined to make a better life. While working multiple jobs, he earned a BS in civil engineering from Oregon State University. It was there he met a graduate student and his future wife Setsuko Tamashiro. He moved to the East Coast where Arthur earned a MS in civil engineering from Yale University, and asked Ms. Tamashiro to quit her teaching job in Hawaii to marry him. They then moved to Cambridge so he could attend the MBA program at Harvard University.

While working on his Doctorate Research Fellow Business Administration from Harvard University, he worked for several premier engineering firms including Linenthal & Becker and Le Messurier. He worked on many of the Boston landmarks of the time including the State Street Bank Building on Franklin Street, Boston City Hall, The Prudential Tower, the JFK Building and the Carpenters' Center at Harvard.

Just after having his two sons, he started his own engineering firm in Boston his own structural engineering consulting firm in 1966 rather than complete his PhD. He specialized in Hospital design. He worked on projects such as Whidden, Frisbee, Emerson,

ARTHUR C.S. CHOO

Leonard Morse, Exeter, and Jordan hospitals. In later years, his practice specialized in rehabilitation, repair and reconstruction of existing buildings.

He served as former director of many organizations including the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, Tai Tong, Inc., Chinese Community Urban Renewal Committee, and the Chinese Evangelical Church. He also served as the former member and chairman of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Designers Selection Board.

His favorite volunteer work was as a board member for the South Cove YMCA and the director Boston Evening Medical Clinic, then a member of the Boston Evening Medical Center Foundation. His work was his passion and he continued working until his most recent hospitalization just before his passing. His favorite things later in life were working, going to every job, and the many weekends he spent with his son Victor.

Arthur is pre-deceased by his wife, Setsuko, his sister, Peggy and her husband James Lee. He is survived by his son Arthur Choo and his wife Theresa, and grandchildren Stephanie, Victoria, and Arthur III (AJ), his son Victor Choo and his wife Carrie Kindler. He has a nephew Stephen Lee and Niece Cynthia Lee and a large extended family in Singapore. He was assisted for many years by his aide Xueling "Linda" Deng.

Burial was in Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to one's choice.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

munition containing 45 rounds, 1 Glock 9mm magazine containing 6 rounds of ammunition, 1 Glock 9mm magazine containing 17 rounds of ammunition, 1 plastic bag with marijuana, 1 Visa debit card belonging to one of the male occupants of the vehicle with, "SHOOTA" printed on the front. Officer Donnelly then confirmed that the fob worked for the suspect vehicle.

While checking the accident scene, Officer Hockney gave Officer Donnelly a backpack which contained a Worcester County Sheriff's Department inmate ID card for one of the occupants of the vehicle, 2 large jars of marijuana, 2 small jars of marijuana, 1 sandwich bag filled with marijuana, 3 smaller segments of sandwich bags tied off filled with marijuana, 1 CBC 9mm Luger ammunition cartridge, 1 Hornady 9mm Luger hollow point ammunition cartridge and 4 hand written sheets of "Nine Trey bloods" gang related codes and oaths.

Another one of the males was transported to the Quincy Police station for processing by Officer Millane. This suspect had 7 Pills containing powder believed to be MDMA, a small bag of a powdery substance consistent with MDMA and a bag of a root type substance believed to be Psilocybin in his front right pocket by the booking crew. While being transported to the station, the suspect who ran and was quickly apprehended attempted to hide two bags of marijuana, a small plastic bag containing 4 pills with a powder consistent with MDMA and one bag of a powder consistent with MDMA in the rear of the cruiser but Officer McGowan caught him doing this.

This suspect was also in possession of $1,401 in assorted currency. This money was seized as being proceeds of illegal drug sales. He was also in possession of one cell phone that was getting multiple calls during the booking process with one message that popped up on the screen asking, "U can deliver?" This phone was seized as evidence. The other male was transported to the Quincy Police station for processing by the Milton Police Department on an outstanding arrest warrant. Once back at the Quincy Police station and after speaking with Detective Monteith it was determined that this particular male was not involved in the incident - he just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time for his sake!

Officer McNeil contacted the Carletta Auto Rental who owns the vehicle and spoke to an employee who stated that the vehicle in question was due back yesterday and would send the rental information to the police station. The three females were juveniles so they were sent to the DCF holding facility in Brockton. They were charged with "Illegal possession of ammunition, Possession of Class D with intent to distribute, conspiracy to violate drug laws, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and defacing property. The male who fled the officers was charged with illegal possession of ammunition, possession of Class D with intent to distribute, conspiracy to violate drug laws, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, defacing property and intimidation of a witness. The other male was charged with illegal possession of ammunition, possession of Class D with intent to distribute, conspiracy to violate drug laws, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, defacing property and possession of psilocybin.

Due to gang affiliation and ammunition found in the vehicle, a thorough search was conducted of the area for handguns, etc. but no gun was found.

On Tuesday July 16, at approximately 12:09 p.m., Officer DiMattio responded to Angus Street for a report of a found firearm. The caller said she found a handgun in her front yard which was near where the arrests were made. The female led the officer to the right side of the house where she had a small garden and pointed out a small fanny pack on the grass. She said she removed it from the bushes, opened the bag and found a handgun inside. She then called the Police. She told the officer when she first noticed the handgun inside the fanny pack she thought it may have had something to do with all the police activity in the neighborhood last night.

Detective Chen arrived to process the scene. He opened the case and located a black 9mm Ruger pistol inside. Officer DiMattio then started checking yards nearby for additional weapons and as he entered a rear yard he noticed a shed with a trash barrel upside down. Next to this barrel he found a black 9mm Glock handgun on the ground.

Detective Chen arrived on scene and processed this weapon. The two handguns may be involved in shootings in Worcester County so the investigation continues.

Nice Work!
